Mexico's Religious War
Here's a Prophetess
Few Harvard Children
The Satanic Order

By Arthur Brisbane

(Copyright, 1926, by The Star Company)

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH does not intend to yield to the new Constitution of Mexico without a struggle. The Associated Press publishes a pastoral letter by Bishop Herrera Y Pina, of Monterey, instructing Catholic priests and worshipers "to offer passive resistance to the government's effort to enforce the sections of the Constitution relating to religion."

PRIESTS ARE ordered "not to fulfill the Constitutional requirements, and to abandon their churches rather than obey other than ecclesiastical authority."

Worshipers are told "to organize a peaceful movement of opposition."

Mexico is in the throes of a real and serious religious war, one that may well cause anxiety.

IF YOU BELIEVE in modern prophecy, study the skies at Easter. Johanna Lehnhart, Berlin prophetess, says God will become active in men's affairs at Easter. Germany will come out ahead of all nations, and as a sign there will be sunshine in Germany from Palm Sunday to Good Friday, with fierce storms, rain, hail, snow in all other countries.

When the world recovers from this surprise, Johanna will reveal all the secrets of life, death and the resurrection.

STATISTICS SHOW that Harvard graduates when they marry have few children, many of them no children.

The number of childless Harvard marriages increases steadily and the number of homes where there are children diminishes steadily.

This doesn't mean that education reduces fertility. It means that the prosperous class are provided with birth control information, forbidden to the poor.

THE AUTHORITIES of Oakland are investigating "The Satanic Order of Lucifer," suspected of including human sacrifices in its ritual. Macario Timon, a leader in the order, was found with his throat cut. That's shocking; perhaps it is true.

But not so many centuries back human sacrifice was a part of every religion of any consequence. As recently as in Old Testament days Abraham took it quite for granted that he should be ordered to sacrifice his son. He would undoubtedly have cut the throat of his son, Isaac, and offered him as burnt offering, had not a substitute been miraculously provided.

DOUBLE TRAGEDY DUE TO HIS JEALOUSY OF RUSSIAN IN GERMANY

Berlin, March 25 (I.N.S.).—Aroused to a murderous fury by her flirtations, John Goodrich, 22, a medical student of Monroe, N. H., early today shot and killed his fiancee, Alice Fitzner, 20, of Cleveland, O., and then took his own life.

The shooting occurred in a taxi cab in which the couple were returning from a restaurant where Goodrich had caused a scene by violently expressing himself on the subject of Miss Fitzner's alleged infatuation for a Russian dancer.

Several weeks ago the girl's enthusiasm for an early wedding disappeared when she fell deeply in love with M. Basileff, the Russian who is appearing at the Grosses Schauspielhaus, a huge theatre built by Max Reinhardt, and at which Miss Fitzner was taking lessons in dancing.

Herr Rosen, director of the theatre, was enthusiastic about the talents of the Detroit girl, describing her as his most talented pupil, and promised to give her a star role in the near future.

The girl was in the quadrille Schauspielhaus, a dancing class composed only of girls of extraordinary beauty. She was very popular in Berlin, having made a hit in a recent revue here.

The tragedy early today occurred while Goodrich and his fiancee were

COMMITTEE VOTES TO UNSEAT BROOKHART

Washington, March 25 (A.P.).—A majority of the Senate Elections Committee voted today to recommend the unseating of Senator Brookhart, Republican, Iowa, in favor of Daniel F. Steck, Democrat.

The fight is expected to open in the Senate floor next week, with indications that it will extend over several days.

175 ALARMED BY FIRE IN BACK BAY HOTEL

More than 175 guests of the Fritz-Carlton Hotel at No. 1128 Boylston street, Back Bay, were alarmed by fire today and many fled from their rooms to the lobby, as smoke surrounded the structure from a grease blaze in the kitchen.

The guests were quickly assured that danger was slight and none left the lobby, while firemen extinguished the flames with a chemical line. President March of Boston University was among the guests who stayed in their rooms.

Flames from a kitchen range ignited grease which had collected on a galvanized iron grating above it. Night Clerk John MacKenzie telephoned to the fire department and damage was confined to a small section of the kitchen.

The alarm of the guests was chiefly from the dense black smoke, caused by the burning grease, which poured from the kitchen windows.

NEW CLEW IN KILLING OF POLICEMAN LEADS SEARCH TO SO. BOSTON

Patrolman Frank J. Comeau, war veteran, shot to death in front of the Fields Corner police station wagon house on Dickens street, Dorchester, was slain by thugs with whom he was acquainted, the police decided today.

The decision was based on the statement of Albert A. Silva, an eye-witness, who declared Comeau cried: "My God, where's my gun," just before the fatal shot was fired.

Silva said one of the assassins rolled the dying policeman over as he sank to the ground, and took his service revolver from the holster on Comeau's hip, after which the trio took to their heels.

Armed with this information the police redoubled their efforts to hunt down the slayers, concentrating on a clue that lead to South Boston, details of which they refused to give out.

In the meantime they were holding three suspects, captured in the Boylston street, Back Bay freight yards while endeavoring to board a train bound for New York.

SHOT IN REVENGE.

Silva's story of the shooting differed in a number of details from those of other eye-witnesses and sustained the early theory that Comeau was shot down in revenge for work he had previously done rousing up automobile thieves.

"I was on my way home from St. Ambrose's Church," said Silva, who lives at No. 44 Dickens street, "when I saw Comeau, whom I knew quite well, talking in the street to three men. I was coming down the left hand sidewalk and approaching within ten feet of the group had opened my mouth to say: 'Hello, Frank,' when I heard him cry: 'My God, where's my gun.'

"He had hardly gotten the words out of his mouth when there was a muffled shot and he sank to the ground. One of the three men stepped, turned Comeau over, took his revolver from the holster on his hip and the three then fled.

MURDER GUN JAMMED.

"Comeau did not have his uniform coat on, having just stepped out of the wagon house, and was wearing a knitted beach jacket, with his gun in a holster belted round his waist. His did not have the revolver in his hand when he was shot."

The murder weapon, which jammed on the attempt to fire a second shot, was slipped by the slayer inside the wounded policeman's jacket, and dropped out when Comeau was placed in the ambulance in which he died.

It was a .25 calibre Colt automatic of the vest pocket type, numbered 180,681, which, according to the records of the manufacturers was sold to Iver, Johnson & Co. of Boston last July. The weapon was apparently sold by them to someone in New York where all trace of it was lost, according to the police.

Another discovery that was occupying considerable of the attention of the police was a man's rubber, found in the soft bed of cinders of the railroad embankment, near where the slayers made their escape.

The rubber was size 8, width of shoe D, and was so new that it would not have been thrown away, in the opinion of the police.

CHECK UP GANGS.

They also decided that the thugs were extremely familiar with the neighborhood where the shooting took place and a check-up of young men living near Harrison square and Freeport street was being made.

A fairly accurate description of the men wanted was obtained from the jumbled stories of eye-witnesses, and a clear, consistent statement of the shooting from Mrs. Paul ne O'Leary of No. 26 Dickens street.

The thugs are described as: No. 1—Twenty-three or twenty-four years old, 150 pounds in weight, wearing dark overcoat and light gray hat.

No. 2—About 28 years old, 175 pounds in weight, well built, wearing a brown overcoat and light gray cap.

No. 3—About 24 or 25 years old, taller than the other two men, wearing a gray coat and gray cap.

According to the police, who reconstructed the shooting, the youths picked Dickens street, as it permitted them to avoid the traffic officer at Field's Corner, and afforded an exit by means of Harrison square to Freeport street. This section is said to contain garages which the police believe to be repositories for stolen automobiles and other loot.

The sedan they had stolen was an ancient battered car, and the speed with which it was driven caused the radiator to boil, with the result that it was stopped almost directly in front of the home of Mrs. O'Leary.

The wagon house of the police station was diagonally opposite this point, the station house itself only two blocks distant, and busy Field's Corner but one block.

The rear of St. Ambrose's Church is directly across the street from the wagon house, and worshippers were beginning to pour out of the edifice, the evening service having just been completed.

When the car stopped, the tallest of the three thugs got out and stood with one hand in his coat pocket, gazing in apparent disgust at the steaming radiator.

He had not been standing there a minute when Officer Comeau, who was substituting last night for Patrolman William Murdock, stepped out of the wagon house. It happens that the police sometimes bring stolen cars to the wagon house for the night when unable to find room in public garages for them. The wagon house is a two-door concrete structure with a capacity for seven or eight cars.

It is believed Officer Comeau, hearing the Ford sedan stop, thought it was a stolen car being brought in by fellow officers, and went to investigate.

VICTIM UNSUSPICIOUS.

As he stepped into the street the two thugs in the car jumped to the ground and walked toward Comeau. When they had approached within a few feet, the policeman apparently inquired as to the trouble, and an answer was made. Whatever was said, and the conversation was exceedingly brief, Comeau did not become suspicious and continued to approach the two youths. As the three met, one of the thugs produced his vest pocket pistol, and pressing it into the abdomen of Comeau, pulled the trigger.

As the policeman reeled from the shock, the thug pulled the trigger a second time, but the shell jammed. Comeau dropped and the thug evidently stopped, thrust his smoking weapon under the knitted beach jacket worn by the policeman and abstracted his service revolver from its holster.

The shooting and the theft of the officer's gun occupied only a very few minutes. In fact the thug who did the slaying had barely straightened up when a group of men coming from the church, having heard the shot, raced to the scene.

As the crowd approached, two of the thugs dashed into the alley adjoining the wagon house, which afforded the best get-away in the neighborhood, as it led to the railroad embankment. The third man, apparently hesitant as to whether he should follow his accomplices, wavered on the sidewalk for a fraction of a second, and then in turn dashed into the alley.

Pursued by the crowd, who kept at a respectful distance, however, because of the gun in the hands of one of the thugs, the trio tore across a broken down fence and onto the railroad embankment, about 150 yards from the Harrison Square station.

Dropping down the other side of the embankment, they disappeared from the sight of their pursuers, but were later seen on Park street, on the other side of the embankment.

It was in the back yard of No. 83 Park street that the policeman's revolver was found by Mrs. Bridget Murphy, who occupies the house there. The thugs had evidently tossed the weapon aside in their flight.

From Park street they disappeared, and the police believe scattered, making their way by devious routes to some hideout.

FAMILIAR WITH LOCALITY.

The police say the course the slayers took in making their escape also showed their familiarity with the neighborhood. The police believe they were novices as the loot they had taken from the Applebaum house was of the sort a professional thief would have scorned.

This stuff, all of which was found in the stolen sedan, consisted of a radio set, two B batteries, an A battery, and a small loud speaker.

It was thought that possibly the young men were under the influence of drugs or liquor, which would in some manner account for the cold-blooded and deliberate shooting of Officer Comeau.

The police believe that the policeman's gun was taken to prevent him from firing after himself being shot, which has happened in previous shootings of officers.

The only explanation for the shooting is the belief that the thugs feared Comeau would search the machine and find the loot in it, to later discover the car itself was stolen.

The slaying of Patrolman Comeau, a World War veteran and the crack shot of the Dorchester division, was the climax to a night of crime for the slayers. At about 7 o'clock they entered the home or Nathan Applebaum on Hansborough street, Dorchester, and after regaling themselves with oranges, gathered up the radio set.

Next they stole the battered Ford of Mrs. Abelson, standing in front of her house at No. 11 Hansborough street. Into the sedan the thugs put the radio outfit. This was shortly after 8:15, a which time Morris Abelson had parked the car and entered the house.

Entering the machine, the trio drove to the home or John V. Fitzgerald at No. 40 Train street, which they entered and took a diamond ring and $400 in cash.

The youths then drove into Dickens street, evidently desirous of escaping attention and disposing of their loot in the vicinity of Freeport street, or possibly farther out.

The steaming radiator forced them to halt, and the shooting followed.

Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson and District Attorney Thomas C. O'Brien were notified and hurried to the Fields Corner station, where they conferred with Captain Matthew Daily.

As a result all railroad stations were ordered watched and an alarm was broadcasted. The District Attorney stated that neither time nor money would be spared by Suffolk County to bring the murderers to justice.

The police were at first confident that finger prints would be found on the handle of the murder weapon, but this hope was dissipated by Inspector "Joe" Rollins, finger print expert at headquarters.

He informed Inspector James Dennessey, homicide expert, that too many other persons had handled the gun after it was dropped by the slayer.

HOW PATROLMAN COMEAU WAS SHOT DOWN, DEATH WEAPON AND WITNESSES

William Christopher of No. 52 Dickens street, Dorchester, who gave chase to the thugs after seeing them shoot down Patrolman Comeau.

Photo-diagram of the slaying of Patrolman Frank J. Comeau of the Field's Corner station. The three thugs parked their stolen car on Dickens street, waiting for its radiator to cool. Comeau saw the trio from the police wagon shed, grew suspicious and was shot dead while questioning them. The y apparently feared discovery of stolen goods in the car. After the shooting they fled.

On top is the automatic pistol used by the thug who killed the patrolman. It was pushed into his abdomen so hard that its end caught in the woolen strands of his sweater. It jammed and they seized the dying patrolman's revolver (below). Under the automatic is its clip of bullets.

Two small children were made fatherless when a thug's bullet laid low Patrolman Frank J. Comeau.

Patrolman Comeau, who was a World War veteran, lived with his little family at No. 15 Bowman street, Dorchester, which was a house of sorrow today as friends and relatives tried vainly to assuage the grief of the young widowed mother and her children.

How Patrolman Frank J. Comeau was shot down in Dorchester in the sight of scores of churchgoers and close to his own station house. Inset is the stolen automobile in which three thugs were sitting. Questioned by the suspicious Comeau, they shot him dead.

WOMAN LOOKING FROM WINDOW SAW MURDER

The clearest and most concise story of the shooting of Patrolman Comeau was given the police by Mrs. Pauline O'Leary of No. 26 Dickens street, an eyewitness.

According to Mrs. O'Leary, only the briefest conversation took place between the officer and his slayers, who began shooting before he had reached them.

"My husband's attention was attracted by the noise of an automobile stopping in the street," she told the police. "It made more noise than a Ford usually does, and he went to the window. I followed and saw the machine almost in front of the house, on the wrong side of the street. There were clouds of steam coming from the radiator.

"One man, the tallest of the three in the car, got out, and with his left hand in his coat pocket, stood looking at the steaming radiator.

"He had been standing there for a very brief time, it couldn't have been more than a minute, when Officer Comeau appeared at the door of the wagon house diagonally opposite.

"The policeman started out into the street, and, as he did so, the other men in the car got out and walked towards him. They met him about half-way between the machine and the wagon house. They started talking before they met, but only a few words could have been exchanged, I, of course, couldn't tell what they talked about, but the policeman did not appear excited at all.

"Just as the two men met him one of them fired and the officer fell in the street. Then a crowd which had come from St. Ambrose's Church started to run toward the scene and the three men fled through the alley beside the wagon house."

Court Clerk Out on Bail

Pittsfield, March 25 (A.P.).—Thomas F. Conlin, former clerk of the District Court of Central Berkshire, who was arrested yesterday on a charge of embezzlement of $6,816.70 of county funds and two qualifying complaints of larceny, pleaded not guilty to the charges today and was released in $2,000 bail.

DORCHESTER MAN TELLS OF COP SHOOTING

William Christopher of No. 52 Dickens street, Dorchester, one of the men who pursued the thugs who killed Patrolman Comeau, told the police he was at one time within reaching distance of the tallest of the trio.

"I had just left St. Ambrose's Church," Christopher told the police, "when I heard a shot. I looked down Dickens street and saw a man on the ground with three other men bending over him. With twelve or fifteen others I started to run to the spot and was within reaching distance of the tallest of the three men when someone coming up from behind jostled me out of my stride.

"The trio fled into the alley, but there were so many running after them it was impossible to seize any of the thugs. Then, again, they were making threats, which slowed up the pursuit.

"The crowd ran so heedlessly that if someone had not warned them off they would have trampled on the form of Officer Comeau.

"When I got to the scene I didn't know that two of the men who pushed by me were members of the band that had shot the policeman.

"I saw a man pick up Comeau by his shoulders and as he did so a pistol slipped out from under the wounded officer's beach jacket. I picked up the gun, a .25 calibre vest pocket type Colt automatic, and later turned it over to Sergeant Cornelius Shea when Comeau was being placed in the ambulance."

DEMANDS $1,000 FOR 'LIFTING' HER FACE

Titled Actress' Mother, Duchess of Rutland, Also Made Defendant in Action

Lady Diana Manners, beautiful English noblewoman, who delighted thousands of Americans with her portrayal of the Nun and the Madonna in "The Miracle," was sued today for $1,000 for alleged failure to pay a Chicago plastic surgeon for "lifting" her face to enhance her beauty.

Her mother, the Duchess of Rutland, was sued for $1,500 by the same surgeon, Dr. Henry J. Schierson.

"Lady Diana had a five-angle facial lift, rejuvenating the throat, the laughing line and the eyes and as well, removing the hint of a double chin," said Dr. Schierson, who previously denied reports that he had operated upon the titled English beauty.

"Her mother, the Duchess of Rutland, had a complete facial lift.

"When it came to paying for their beautifying, however, they tried to talk loftily about 'deferring payment.' When I heard they were leaving the city I filed out, that's all. Lady Diana's promise to recommend me to her very good friend and another beauty, the Queen of Rumania, didn't cut as much to me as hard cash for my work."

Both women were served with notices of the suits as they boarded the Twentieth Century Limited in Chicago, bound for New York, whence at midnight tomorrow they will sail for England aboard the Olympic.

Lady Diana, whose beauty was the talk of America during the playing of "The Miracle," has long been hailed as England's most charming woman.

When she leaves American shores aboard the Olympic she will be one of the distinguished list of first cabin passengers, numbering 400 and including the Most Rev. Archbishop E. A. CHARGES AGAINST SHERIFF HEARD

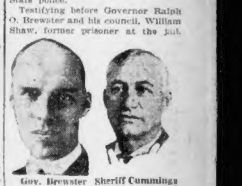
Cummings Accused of Being the Pal of Crooks Before Brewster and Council

Augusta, Me., March 25.—A Neat little stud poker game, one called "the millionaire's game," were played at the Kennebec County Jail by prisoners, one of them testified today at the State House hearing on charges against Sheriff Henry F. Cummings.

The sheriff's removal has been asked by Franklin Fisher, special State prosecutor, the complainant being Arthur H. Field, chief of the State police.

Testifying before Governor Ralph O. Brewster and his council, William Shaw, former prisoner at the jail, declared that stud poker was played in the institution and that there was drinking among the prisoners.



Gov. Brewster Sheriff Cummings

The "millionaire's game," he said was played upstairs and was a bit exclusive.

Shaw testified he had constantly seen prisoners with bottles whose contents ranged from whiskey to "canned heat."

Reading from a diary he kept in prison, Shaw quoted: "Been here a year, boys playing cards, drunk. Plenty of refreshments." By "refreshments," he said, he meant liquor.

Shaw was the first witness in the case and was called after the Governor and Council, as the "court," had denied requests by Joseph E. F. Connelly, counsel for Sheriff Cummings, for specifications and for limiting of testimony to the sheriff's present term in office.

CROWD AT HEARING.

Corridors of the State House were filled with an excited crowd as the hearing before the executive council commenced. More than 40 witnesses, including both men and women, were under summons to testify for or against the accused sheriff.

Much of the prosecutor's opening address was directed at alleged conditions in the county jail where, it was charged, prisoners were held in thievery, drinking, gambling, immorality and the sale of intoxicating liquors.

"Sheriff Cummings not only permitted others to take, but he himself took seized liquor from the jail and delivered it to friends and acquaintances hereabouts," continued Fisher.

"We will show that the sheriff has been on friendly terms with wealthy and prominent bootleggers and has sat in their homes engaged in friendly conversations, while a cache containing thousands of dollars in intoxicating liquor intended for illegal sale lay practically under his feet.

TO NAME BOOTLEGGERS.

"We will show also that a convicted bootlegger, while a prisoner in the county jail, arranged for delivery in Augusta from outside the State of a large load of intoxicating liquor and later went to a Federal prison for a crime committed while he was supposed to be in the custody of Henry F. Cummings.

"We also show you that in Augusta there existed a house of ill repute where liquor flowed freely and we will place Henry F. Cummings in this house on friendly terms with the proprietress.

Sheriff Cummings allowed dangerous prisoners to be absent from the jail and while out these prisoners have committed crimes."

GODFATHER TO FLY HERE FOR CHRISTENING

Unaware of the stir she is causing in aviation and social circles of Washington and Boston, three-weeks-old Marie Joanne Murray sleeps while her prospective godfather prepares for flight by airplane to the christening in St. Theresa's Church, West Roxbury, Sunday night.

Marie is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Murray of No. 112 Perham street, West Roxbury, and grand-daughter of Ex-Senator Michael J. Murray and J. Philip O'Donnell, former director of public celebrations under Mayor Curley.

Lieutenant-Commander George D. Murray will leave Washington Friday, according to present plans and land at the East Boston Airport late in the afternoon, attend the christening Sunday and take off on Monday.

The new baby is the first girl in a family of six, two of whom have passed away. Thomas, age 6; Philip, age 5, and Edward, age 4, are delighted with their new sister.

Lieutenant Commander Murray and the baby's father are sons of ex-Senator Michael J. Murray. Both were aviators during the war. The Lieutenant Commander is professor of aeronautics at Annapolis and is connected with the Bureau of Aircraft in Washington. Until recently he has been stationed in China.

Mrs. Murray, daughter of J. Philip O'Connell, is a singer of note. She is solist at the Second Church of Boston and has sung in many Catholic churches. She is the proud possessor of autographed photos from Gen. John J. Pershing and John McCormack

DR. M'GAULEY FINED $25 FOR LACK OF HEAT

Dr. Walter G. McGauley, unsuccessful candidate for Mayor, was today fined $25 by Judge Murray in Municipal Court for failure to provide sufficient heat to tenants of a house at No. 406 Marlboro street.

The court halted the trial last Thursday, giving the defendant until today to improve heating conditions.

Mrs. Richard Peabody, one of the tenants, today testified that conditions since Thursday had but slightly improved. She said that most of the people occupying the dwelling were aged, ranging from fifty-four to sixty-two years.

Explaining that the house was heated by oil, Dr. McGauley ascribed the dearth of heat to inability to purchase fuel oil in Boston. He said the heating apparatus was defective and that it would require extensive repair. He blamed the occupants for keeping the windows open, but this was later denied by Mrs. Peabody on the stand.

WHITTEMORE'S ALLEGED HANG-OUT IS BURNED

New York, March 25.—The Chantes Club, night club which drew publicity recently as the reported "hang out" of the Whittemore bandit gang, was burned out, the loss being estimated at $25,000.

GREENLEAF FOR SCHOOLHOUSE BOARD

Mayor Nichols today appointed Luther C. Greenleaf, architect and former State representative, to the Schoolhouse Commission, and submitted his name to the Civil Service Commission.

The vacancy was caused when the board refused to approve the Mayor's appointment of Horace E. Dunlop. The latter refused to allow Mayor Nichols to submit his name a second time.

Mr. Greenleaf, who lives at No. 6 Uplands avenue, Dorchester, is president of the Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, a member of the zoning advisory board of the city, and also a member of the zoning adjustment board. His new position carries a salary of $4,000. Public buildings designed by the appointee include the Revere City Hall, Chapman School in East Boston; Fisher Ames School, Quincy; Avery School, Dedham; Masonic Temple, Dorchester. He remodeled the old Dedham High School and designed the First National Bank Building in Brighton.

For thirty-one years he has been designing and supervising construction of buildings for the city of Boston.

GETS CHARGES AGAINST JUDGE

Washington, March 25 (A.P.)—Articles of impeachment against Federal Judge George W. English of the Eastern Illinois district were presented to the House today by its Judiciary Committee. The five articles were based on evidence presented at prolonged hearings. A minority of the committee held this evidence insufficient. The articles charge the judge with abuse of the powers and unlawful conduct in connection with bankruptcy cases. If the House upholds the charges, Judge English will be tried in the Senate.

GOODWIN BILL FOR SECRETARY IS SHELVED

Registrar Frank A. Goodwin today suffered a severe defeat at the hands of the House Ways and Means Committee. The committee voted reference to the "next annual session" on the bill to provide him with a secretary.

At a hearing on the bill Commissioner of Public Works William F. Williams criticized the legislation because it would give Goodwin the appointing power instead of the public works commissioner, who is the department head.

POSTOFFICE ROBBERS IN EAST CAMBRIDGE JAIL

Shackled to two deputy marshals, Edward Tracey of Buffalo, Frank Fagan and Thomas W. Burns, both of Providence, caught by a Blackstone sheriff robbing the Millville postoffice, were lodged in the East Cambridge jail today to await Federal Grand Jury action. They already had been arraigned before U. S. Commissioner Crandell in Worcester and on pleas of not guilty were held in substantial bail, which, at present, they are unable to raise.

Paterson, N. J., March 25 (A.P.).—William H. Mayer of Passaic, 69, a former police judge, today was held in $250 bail in special sessions for trial on serious charges. A sixteen-year-old girl was held with Mayer. Mayer is the father of Walter Mayer, bank clerk of New York, who recently attempted to take his own life after killing Shirley McIntyre, with whom he was infatuated.

LONE DEBATER OFFERS DEFENSE FOR EVE

Lewiston, Me., March 25 (A.P.)—G. S. Ackerland of Usk, Wash., has challenged single handed the Bates College debating team to discuss either geology or Genesis, President Clifton D. Gray said today.

Ackerland said he could prove that ice in the glacial age came from the Bay of Guinea and that there was neither sin nor disobedience committed by Adam and Eve in the Garden of Eden.

President Gray replied that if Mr. Ackerland happened to be in Maine he would try to find him forensic opponents.

PROFESSOR BOLTON'S THEORY OF THE HISTORY OF CAPTAIN KIDD'S TREASURE

Captain Kidd, arch Pirate, was noted for his cruelty to his captives. He would blindfold them and make them walk the plank, as depicted above.

The famous Pirate was not content with capturing and plundering ships, but after this job was finished, he would fire the crafts, as shown above.

The finder of the loot sold it for $5,000 to John Jacob Astor, who disposed of it in England for $1,400,000, according to Prof. Bolton of the University of California.

GIRL VICTIM'S PLEA SAVES 'HUGGER'

Forgives Somerville Student, Who Is Placed on Probation

A plea to the court by a girl he attempted to hug in the Sullivan square station waiting room kept Wilbur Hanford, eighteen-year-old Somerville High School junior, out of jail today.

Charged with assault and battery on Mrs. Margaret Carlson, 17 years old, of No. 215 Pearl street, Cambridge, the youth was given a suspended six months' sentence and was placed on probation by Judge Sullivan in Charlestown court.

"I wanted to hug her," said Hanford, explaining why he put his arms around the girl-wife.

Her story was different, however. She declared he seized her throat, struck her in the mouth, loosening a tooth, threw her to the floor, sat on her, took her shoes off and kicked her in the stomach.

"I don't want to see him sent away," she pleaded, however, to Judge Sullivan. "I don't want to see anybody sent away."

Probation Officer Coady and Attorney Hughes also asked probation for the boy, after character witnesses, including a sub-master at the Somerville High School, had testified that he had not slipped before.

One of the conditions of the probation was that young Hanford pay pretty Mrs. Carlson $50 to compensate for damage done her clothing.

The high school student, according to testimony, ran hatless out of the waiting room after his attack but was captured by George Chase of Charlestown in Alford street, and turned over to a Boston Elevated special officer.

DRY "CZAR" PUTS IMPORT BAN ON PURE BAY RUM

Washington, March 25.—Import of bay rum made from pure alcohol was banned today by General L. C. Andrews, prohibition czar. Tourists who bring bay rum into the country must have a certificate that it was manufactured from denatured alcohol.

Treasury officials said imported bay rum usually labeled "hair tonic" is highly intoxicating and good for beverage purposes.

Troops' Pay Bill Vetoed

Governor Fuller today vetoed a bill allowing the city of Springfield to pay their salaries to National Guardsmen in the employ of the city while they are in camp.

ALL CONGRESS 'SOBER,' SAYS DR. WILSON

Charges the References to 25 Years Ago Were Misrepresented

Dover, Del., March 25 (A.P.).—Dr. Clarence True Wilson of the board of temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, commenting today on Representative O'Connor's reference to him in the House at Washington, said that O'Connor tried to make it appear that Dr. Wilson's representation of twenty-five years ago in Congress was a statement of present condition.

Representative O'Connor characterized as a "lie statements quoting Dr. Wilson as saying that drunks had been escorted from the House floor in pre-Volstead days.

"I never made a statement that any member of the present Congress ever drank intoxicating liquor," said Dr. Wilson.

"I contrasted the present sober and Christian body of men with that which we used to have twenty-five years ago when we had two saloons in the Capitol building to accommodate some of the representatives that the brewers and saloonkeepers used to select for us.

"I saw scenes in the closing nights of Congress then that would be absolutely unbelievable today. Men got drunk and it seemed to be considered no disgrace. I have lived in Washington ten now for ten years, and have never smelt liquor on the breath of any Senator or Congressman in those ten years.

"This changed condition is owing to improved sentiment and to the prohibition law of State and Union which broke the brewers' strangle hold on politics. We are getting a decent set of men in politics instead of the old rum shop fraternity that dominated the politics of near- all our cities 25 years ago."

BUCKNER URGES MODIFICATION OF DRY LAW

U. S. District Attorney Says U. S. Cannot and N. Y. Will Not Enforce It

New York, March 25 (A.P.).—United States District Attorney Emory R. Buckner, speaking at a Lion's Club luncheon today, presented a "prohibition catechism," in which he prepared his own questions and answers.

Some of the questions and answers follow:

"Is prohibition being enforced in New York city?"

"Only partially, not adequately."

"Why is not prohibition being enforced?"

"Because the government is not equipped to enforce it."

"Will the government adequately enforce prohibition in New York?"

"No, it cannot."

"Who can't?"

"The State."

"Will New York State pass an enforcement act?"

"Apparently not."

"What are we going to do about it?"

"I suggest a compromise. Let Congress modify the Volstead Act so as to permit each State to define non-intoxicating liquor. This definition to bind both State and Federal authorities."

"Are you thinking of wine and beer?"

"Yes."

'DRYS' TO CLEAN OUT HALLS OF CONGRESS

One Man Who Dropped a Case of Rum There Held by Court in $2000

Washington, March 25 (A.P.).—Prohibition enforcement officers said today they intended to clean the halls of Congress of liquor, if there is any to be found there.

G. T. Murphy, chief of the District of Columbia prohibition agents, said he had been unable to connect the visit of George L. Cassiday with a case of liquor to the House office building Saturday with any member of Congress or staffs, and he intended to explore the Capitol situation thoroughly.

The announcement not only follows the arrest of Cassiday but many recent charges and counter-charges of bootleggers finding the offices of the House and Senate a fruitful place for business.

Senator Cole Blease, Democrat, of South Carolina, among others, has charged that bootleggers make daily rounds of congressional offices seeking customers.

IS HELD IN $2,000.

Cassidy was arraigned before a United States commissioner today but a crowd that had gathered expecting sensational tales of liquor dealings with legislators was disappointed, for at his request he was granted a continuance until April 7. He was released in $2,000 bail after pleading not guilty to charges of illegal transportation and possession of liquor.

The six quarts alleged to have been left behind when he fled at the approach of a police officer in a corridor of the House office building Saturday have been analyzed and declared poor whisky.

HOUSE DEFERS HEARING.

The House unofficial committee for modification of the Volstead act will give the Senate Judiciary Committee first whack at testimony and will defer its own hearing set for next Wednesday.

This action was decided upon at a conference of 84 Representatives and eight Senators in favor of modification, who met under the chairmanship of Representative Hill (R.), Maryland.

B. & M. DEMANDS DECISION ON TAX CUT

Claiming unreasonable delay, the Boston & Maine Railroad today filed a petition in Supreme Court for a writ of mandamus to compel Boston assessors to render a decision on a petition of the railroad for an abatement of its 1925 tax. Property involved is in Boston proper and in Charlestown, and is valued at $23,000,000.

The railroad alleges that hearings on its tax petition were held in March and April 1924; and that on August, 1925, the railroad, in a letter to the board of assessors, asked for a decision. None, however, has been forthcoming, the railroad says.

The petition for the writ will be argued before Judge Pierce in Supreme Court on April 16.

Wheeler, (D) of Montana. The resolution, sponsored by Senator Walsh (D) of Montana, defense counsel for Wheeler in both prosecutions, provoked an hour's debate before it was adopted.

EX-WELLESLEY GIRL GRILLED IN SHOOTING

Esther Paul of Gloucester, known by former Greater Boston chums as "Polly" Paul, was questioned by the police authorities in Chicago today as one of the chief figures in the mysterious shooting of John Van Zant, twenty-four-year-old radio engineer at Chicago University.

Miss Paul, who is twenty-eight, studied at Wellesley after being graduated from Gloucester High School, and later became a teacher at Massachusetts Agricultural College and at a fashionable private school in Greenwich, Ct. She is now a special student at Chicago University while teaching at a nearby girls' academy.

Told about the shooting the girl's father, T. D. Paul, a Boston construction engineer, disclosed that his daughter had until recently been engaged to marry a Chicago youth, but broke the engagement. This youth was not Van Zant.

"'Polly,' as her chums call her, has been away from us for a long time and we do not hear from her very often," said her father.

The Chicago University youth was shot nearly in front of Miss Paul's boarding house, the bullet just grazing his scalp. When police questioned the couple they heard conflicting stories, it is claimed, and neither story satisfied them.

At first it was reported that Miss Paul was returning home from a visit to the home of a student friend when two men accosted her, and Van Zant dashed to her protection. Later police were told they had been together at Van Zant's studio and were held up by a thug, who shot the youth because he did not raise his hands quickly enough.

Police announced they are searching for two young men who, they say, were in the company of the Gloucester girl and a friend, Miss Gertrude Woods, an instructor in the University of Minnesota.

GIRL CHARGED WITH STRANGLING HER BABY

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 25 (I.N.S.).—Mary Seigel, 18-year-old unwed mother, and John Mosco, 30, married to another woman two months ago, were turned over to the county coroner today in connection with the slaying of Miss Seigel's child shortly after birth. Detectives, who found the infant's body buried near the mother's home, said Miss Seigel admitted choking the baby to death with her apron strings. She accused Mosco of being the child's father, and said he advised her to kill it. The young mother was arrested on a charge of murder and Mosco as an accessory.

SHE'LL BRIGHTEN SOME LONELY HOME

Shirley, aged four months, is in the hospital of Dr. E. T. Ramson, No. 231 Bay State road, waiting for somebody to adopt her. Her father, a soldier in the U. S. Army, will not acknowledge her, and her mother can no longer support her. The city editor of the Boston Evening American is helping to find a good home.

FRENCH REVENUE BILL PASSED BY CHAMBER

Paris, March 25 (A.P.).—The Chamber of Deputies' discussion of the first half of the 1926 budget ended today 11h the passage of the revenue section of the finance bill by 415 to 128. The Socialists voted in the negative. This section, providing for revenue of 36,431,000,000 francs (about $1,275,785,000), now goes to the Senate.

Finance Minister Peret pointed out that the budget as voted is not balanced, there being a deficit of 4,573,000,000 francs. His taxation proposals, including a business turnover tax and a civic poll tax.

CHAMBER TOLD NEW LAWS NOT PANACEA

Characterizing modern business as a "race between education and catastrophe," Merle Thorpe, editor of "The Nation's Business," appealed to the members of the Chamber of Commerce today at their noonday luncheon to think before joining in a clamor for more laws for business ills.

"We are too apt to regard Washington as made up of supermen with the power to perform any economic miracle by passing a law," said Thorpe, "when as a matter of fact it is just a good cross-section of American citizenry—representative government."

"Conventions of larger industries have changed from meetings to discuss problems of production and increased output to conferences between attorneys to determine what they could do without running afoul of various interpretations of Federal and State laws affecting their businesses," he told them.

Ninety per cent. of the laws affect business, according to Thorpe, and the government looks to the business man for salvation instead of a continued chorus of, "there ought to be a law," without a complete study of the effect of that law on business.

President R. W. Boyden announced the next luncheon for April 1, with Frank Sisson, vice-president of the Guaranty Trust of New York, as speaker.

FINAL TALK ON HOW TO SAVE CHAPMAN

Counsel Have Conference in New York on Habeas Corpus Plan

Hartford, March 25 (A.P.).—Final decision on the course of action to save Gerald Chapman, sentenced to be hanged for murder on April 6, will be made today at a conference in the office of his attorney, Frederick J. Groehl of New oYrk City. Meanwhile, in his cell at the State prison, Chapman is awaiting the outcome.

Provided with a signed petition in which U. S. District Judge Edwin S. Thomas would be asked to issue a writ of habeas corpus, which for the second time would set the Chapman case into the Federal Court, Attorney Ray M. Wiley of Springfield, Mass., accompanied by Attorney Joseph M. Friedman, went to New York this afternoon.

If counsel decide to go ahead with the habeas corpus plan, Wiley will call on Judge Thomas on the return trip and endeavor to get his signature.

In the discovery of Charles William Gregory, claimed by Attorney Groehl to be the missing alibi witness who would have clinched the case for Chapman in proving that the man convicted of the murder was in New York on the night previous to the murder rather than in Meriden, as claimed by the State, the plans of defence counsel are being revealed.

Meanwhile there is no announcement from the office of the State's attorney relative to the claims advanced by Chapman's counsel. The policy of the office has been to meet each move as it is made, and there will be no comment on the claims until they crystallize in court action.

'LOOP' URGED BY SMITH FOR CHAMBER

Writes the Senate Ways and Means Chairman in Behalf of Great Highway

Fitz-Henry Smith, Jr., chairman of the Committee on Municipal and Metropolitan Affairs of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, has addressed a letter to Walter E. McLane, chairman of the Senate Committee on Ways and Means, setting forth the Chamber's hearty approval of the Circumferential highway.

Mr. Smith's letter follows:

"The Boston Chamber of Commerce, through its committee on municipal and metropolitan affairs, is heartily in favor of Senate 289 and House 188.

"The circumferential highway seems to us well fitted to supply a much-needed route around the city of Boston so that traffic moving between the North and South Shores may not be forced to pass through the highly congested centres of Boston and other cities in the district.

"We furthermore believe that the route has been planned very wisely and economically by utilizing existing roads through the parkway system. It is truly the outstanding highway project of the Metropolitan Planning Division for this year.

"The proposed parkway along the Charles River offers an advantageous route in and out of Boston from the west. It should serve to develope the Boston shore of the Charles River as well as to relieve traffic congestion on existing streets. In directness and connections serve to make it a desirable addition to the system of Parkways in the district.

"We sincerely hope, therefore, that the Legislature will authorize both these routes for the relief of congestion upon metropolitan highways."

N. H. YOUTH KILLS FIANCEE AND SELF IN GERMANY

in a taxicab in a traffic jam, surrounded by crowds of people.

When the police arrived they found the girl with a wound in her right temple and Goodrich shot through the head. Both were rushed to the Norbert Hospital, where Goodrich died soon after admission, but the girl lingered and was able to tell of the tragedy.

Goodrich had been a student in the famous Charite Hospital, where he had studied under some of the most famous German surgeons.

H. H. Tyndale of Salt Lake City, a fellow-student and chum of Goodrich, told the International News Service that jealousy could have been the only motive for the crime as Goodrich had not been out of funds, despite rumors that both he and the girl were in financial straits.

"John was terribly in love with Alice," said Tyndale. "Alice broke the engagement a year ago. When John returned from America recently, Alice told him that it was all over forever, but wanted to be good friends. However, John was sure he would rewin her."

Goodrich was formerly a student in Syracuse, N. Y., Tyndale said.

Goodrich a Son of Former New Hampshire Minister

Concord, N. H., March 25 (A.P.)—John B. Goodrich, American medical student who committed suicide in Berlin early today after shooting to death Miss Alice Fitzner, a dancer, was born twenty-four years ago in Monroe, N. H., where his father, Rev. George B. Goodrich, was a Methodist clergyman. The family moved to New York State nearly twenty years ago.

The elder Goodrich came to Monroe from Pembroke, Wales, in 1900, and preached at Monroe and North Monroe for four years. He was transferred to Laconia and later to the New York conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

His wife died five years ago at Beaver Dam, N. Y., and Rev. Mr. Goodrich died two years ago.

An older brother of the student, George Goodrich, served as an aviator in the World War.

Girl Left Cleveland for Berlin 3 Years Ago

Cleveland, O., March 25 (A.P.)—Alice Fitzner, slain in Berlin today, left here three years ago for Germany to study ballet dancing. She visited her parents in Lakewood, a suburb, for two months last Summer. Friends said she appeared much in love with Goodrich.

DENOUNCED BY CHAMBERLAIN

London, March 25 (I.N.S.)—"The League of Nations is not a superstate and anyone who tries to make it a superstate will destroy it," declared Sir Austen Chamberlain, when he received the freedom of the city of London today, in honor of his efforts at Locarno.

Sir Austen defended his course at the recent Geneva conference, which failed, and expressed regret that the Locarno treaties had not been consummated. He declared, however, that the league was not weakened by the breakdown and would survive, as would the Locarno treaties.

JEWELS STOLEN IN BROOKLINE

Jewels valued at $800 were stolen from the home of Dr. and Mrs. Frederic W. Sherburne of No. 110 Coolidge street, Brookline, it was revealed today.

The thieves entered in the evening when the family was absent by forcing a side window. After ransacking every room they got away with three rings, a scarf pin and a string of pearls.

TWO COPS SHOT BY 'GENTLEMAN RADIO THIEF'

New York, March 25 (A.P.)—A "gentleman radio burglar, as elusive as an ether wave, today capped seven weeks' search for him in the Woodhaven section of Queens by escaping from five different policemen after an exchange of forty shots in which he wounded two of them.

Patrolman Kenny was pronounced in a critical condition after being shot in the chest.

The burglar has stolen 150 radio sets, and other valuables, invariably making his calls between 2 and 3:30 a. m. He has been called the "gentleman radio burglar" because of his immaculate dress and the fact that he had stolen sets with an estimated value of more than $10,000. He never takes anything but the best sets.

The burglar escaped today, after the house in which he was seen was surrounded by three policemen and a detective.

Every available policeman was summoned immediately and scores of houses were searched, and the patrons of lunchrooms questioned.

Five suspects were arrested, but Donnelly said none of them was the burglar.

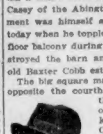
MINERS BACK PINCHOT IN PENNSYLVANIA FIGHT

Harrisburg, Pa., March 25 (A.P.)—The mine workers and their friends are determined to elect Gov. Pinchot to the United States Senate and defeat Sen. George Wharton Pepper and Cong. William S. Vare, the Governor's opponents. So asserted Philip Murray, international vice-president, and other officers of the miners' organization, in a statement protesting against the suggestion that Governor Pigchot withdraw.

FIRE CHIEF HURT AS ABINGTON INN BURNS

Abington, March 25.—After rescuing a fellow fireman, Chief John L. Casey of the Abington Fire Department was himself seriously injured today when he toppled from a second floor balcony during a blaze that destroyed the barn and house on the old Baxter Cobb estate.

The big square mansion, on a hill opposite the courthouse, and more than 100 years old, was also known as the Old King House and the Abington Inn.



Chief Casey.

A firebug is believed to have started the blaze in the big barn. By the time an alarm was sounded the flames had leaped to the three-story mansion and swept through the house, leaving only the shell.

Fire Captain Louis Hochstraffer, leading his men on the second floor, was overcome by smoke, but was not missed for several minutes. Then Chief Casey groped his way through the smoke and falling embers and staggered down again to the open air with the unconscious captain.

Less than five minutes later the chief was hurt. Both fire-fighters are under a doctor's care, with Captain Hochstraffer in the more serious condition because of a weak heart.

Pleads Guilty

Springfield, March 25.—Frank Sullivan, 28, of No. 1152 State street, pleaded guilty today of assaulting an eight-year-old girl. He was sentenced to two years in the House of Correction.

The stocks that fell down are not necessarily less valuable than they were, but gamblers, when frightened, throw their stocks overboard all together, and there is no one to buy.

YOU HEAR IT said, "The foreign element must be cleared out of Chicago to wipe out crime."

And you hear, "The foreign element must be kept out of the United States, that our beautiful, clean American stock may develop free from contamination." That sounds well. But the three most vicious murderers that have recently attracted attention in Greater New York "all came of clean American parentage, but 'went to the bad' early."

That is enlightening. It isn't the man or woman, foreign-born, coming here for a chance to work hard, that menaces the welfare of the United States.

HENRY FORD seems to know about transportation and business generally. He bought a bankrupt railroad that couldn't pay expenses. High finance smiled sardonically. Last year the common stock of that railroad earned $16.59 a share.

pour in from all quarters, but the force of the bear attack was broken by intermittent rallies made possible by short covering and the extension of banking support for a few stocks. Another severe drain on the money market resulted from the calling of bank loans, with the renewal rate on call funds raised to 5 per cent.

Representative stocks, such as Baldwin, American Locomotive, Studebaker, Chrysler, Kennecott Copper, National Lead and Gulf States Steel, were among those hammered down to new low levels for the year, but standard rails, including Atlantic Coast Line, Chesapeake & Ohio and St. Louis Southwestern, rallied 3 to 5 points.

WARM FIGHT IN HOUSE ON VACCINATION BILL

A bill to compel vaccination in private schools was substituted by the House today after an adverse committee report had been overturned in a bitter battle. Party lines, which have held practically throughout the session, went by the board when the vote was taken. The call of the roll showed 101 in favor of substitution and 92 against.

PRINCE IN GOWN OF WOMAN HELD AS SMUGGLER

Louis Ferdinand of Spain Was Once Reported to Wed Mabelle Gilman

Lisbon, March 25 (A.P.).—Prince Louis Ferdinand of Bourbon-Orleans, who has lived in Lisbon since his expulsion from France, was discovered yesterday at Algarve, on the frontier, disguised as a Spanish woman.

The authorities declare he has been under police surveillance on suspicions of being implicated in the smuggling of cocaine. Some smuggled goods were found in his possession, but no drugs were among them.

The prince has telegraphed to the Queen of Spain protesting against the search.

He was expelled from France in October, 1924, on charges of scandalous conduct. It was said at the time that his cousin, King Alfonso of Spain, approved of the action of the French authorities, and a few days later Madrid dispatches said Louis Ferdinand had been deprived of all his rights as an Infanta of Spain.

He is the second son of the Infanta Don Antonio, Duke of Galliera, and of the Infante Eulalia, aunt of the King of Spain.

While in Paris the prince led a gay life, and was the favorite guest of some wealthy American women visitors.

It was reported at one time he was engaged to Mrs. Mabelle Gilman Corey, former wife of William R. Corey, steel magnate, but this was denied. The prince is 37 years old.

CLIVE RETURNS IN NEW HAY PRODUCT

By NICHOLAS YOUNG

THE ceremonies attending the return of E. E. Clive to the interesting group of Copley Players were many sided; also they were clamorous. For the first time on any stage Ian Hay's very new "False Pretences" was given to the world; for a second time this season, upon our own Copley stage, the blushing author stalked forth and made a first-class speech.

E. E. Clive

To those who insist upon shrieking wildly for an author when a new dramatic child is born, we may recommend Ian Hay. Responding to the call of his disciples, he made the best speech we have ever heard from an unwilling playwright.

As for the play itself, everything passed off smoothly, with Clive moving through the evening in his own artistic way as the aged and thoroughly counterfeit student of literature, Adam Baxter. The pressure upon Clive was severe, but he managed himself faultlessly. "False Pretences" was no sprightly comedy, as you have become accustomed to expect from the Ian Hay storehouse of plays—it was serious drama carefully built up to one gripping situation.

Turning close upon Mr. Clive's heels was Katherine Standing. An estimable artist of excellent talent, she laid her pretty shoulder to the wheel in vigorous fashion. There was commanding authority in her reading—you would have thought she had been playing the part for weeks. Solemn, stiff and generally uncertain, Norman Cannon was the third member of the hard working trio that sustained the evening's most precious burdens.

As first performances go "False Pretences" stood up sturdily, although it more than evident that before the week is out a sharp blade will be drawn across some few long and tedious speeches. Such comedy as there was in the play was discovered in ever budding smart lines and in the sophisticated frankness of the girl so admirably play by Miss Standing.

PIERRE WOMEN'S SHOE SALON A HUB NOVELTY

A French shoe salon, a feature of the newly-opened Pierre Feminine Footwear store at No. 226 Boylston street, is intriguing Boston women shoppers with its novelty and artistic decoration. The store, a new type for Boston, is modelled on the French shoe stores of New York, which are enjoying a marked popularity in the metropolis.

The Pierre salon was designed by Harold F. Kellogg, the architect who planned Alden Park Manor, the million dollar apartment house of Brookline. The salon is adorned in the style of the Louis. The walls are done in soft grey with panels outlined in blue and gold. The French doors are hung with blue and gold draperies.

P. M. McEnaney, a resident partner in the new concern, was formerly a buyer at Filene's.

New York, March 25.—Hampton Williams, colored, who, police said, confessed to stealing more than $12,000 worth of jewelry from tenants of an apartment house where he worked as an elevator operator during the past three years, said that he had squandered all of the proceeds in betting on the horses and "playing policy."

TUFTS SELECTS FAVORITES

Hubert Whitney Dowson of Braintree was accorded an unusual honor by the seniors at Tufts College when he was voted not only the best all around man in college, but also the best athlete and the most representative Tufts man. Also he was chosen the most respected senior.

Dowson has for two years captained the varsity basketball and tennis teams.

Respected as is Dowson, however, it was Eugene F. Goss of Auburn, Me., who was elected the most popular man, while Francis H. Russell of Newton was chosen the man who had done most for the college.

Prof. Royal A. Stelner was chosen the most popular prof in the college of liberal arts, and Prof. James Reynolds in the engineering school.

PICKETS IDLE IN STRIKE PROBE

Passaic, N. J., March 25 (A.P.).—Leaders of the textile strike battalion their picketing campaign and are centering their energies on an effort to obtain Congressional investigation of the mills.

Picketing was suspended today and workers made affidavits alleging violations of their constitutional rights by police and had working conditions at the mills. These affidavits, reported to number about 5,000, will be sent to the House committee now considering a Congressional inquiry.

Albert Weisbord, strike leader, says Senator Edwards of New Jersey is in error if correctly quoted as saying Weisbord was not a citizen of New Jersey or of the United States.

"I was born in New York city," Weisbord said. "I was educated at Harvard and I served in the United States army, being stationed at Camp Devens.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Works of Lawrence Tenney Stevens on Exhibition at Art Museum

FRIENDS AND ADMIRERS of Lawrence Tenney Stevens, the young Brighton artist, who won the Prix de Rome in 1922, are flocking into the Museum of Fine Arts these last March days to view his exhibition there.

MR. STEVENS, A PRODUCT of the Museum's Art School, has called for his latest wrestle many special honors, including the Prix de Rome, and on three years of study and honorable mention in an earlier competition.

THE PRIZE WINNING piece is a beautiful model in clay called "Music" and the honorable mention group named "The Tribute to Heroism," both of which may be seen at the museum. Also, there are several examples of his work in the halls.

IN LIGHTER VEIN, and as an extra added attraction to the Stevens exhibit, one may actually view the King of Italy's thumb print on the statuette of a lame fellow, done in bronze. The story is an amusing little side light on royalty's ways.

THE STATUETTE, was just completed and newly lacquered in black as the King and the royal party arrived for a call at the Stevens studio in the Academy at Rome, the artist's very first meeting with his majesty.

TAKING THE STATUE in hand, the royal thumb became black with not yet dry lacquer to the horror of courtiers and attendants. The King, however, good humoredly laughed off such a contretemps and now the imprint of the royal thumb is forever on the statuette.

CHICAGO IS NEXT in line for the Stevens exhibition, but at present writing it is not definitely known whether the sculptor will be able to accompany his work to the Windy City. Mr. Stevens is now engaged on a commission for the Boston Public Library, and it is probable that he will remain in Boston to complete the work.

MISS OLIVIA AMES, an accomplished sports woman and leader of the younger set. She is a daughter of the Oliver Ames family of Boston and North Easton and is just now abroad.

but having been invited to come to the Chicago Art Institute some time in September. The statue "Alba," a much admired piece, goes to Detroit for exhibition in April.

ONE OF BEACON HILL'S most interesting establishments is the John Coggeshall apartment and its collection of wonderful old violins. "Strads" for the most part, of which Mr. Coggeshall is a connoisseur and owns a priceless and vastly important assortment.

MR. AND MRS. GOGGESHALL and their son, Theodore, hail from Providence and have a summer home at Watch Hill, R. I. This winter they have the Frank Gardner Hale apartment, at the corner of West Cedar and Revere streets.

THE YOUNG SON of the house, Theodore, is musically inclined, naturally, and is pursuing the study under the tutelage of that well-known violinist, Boston's own Mr. Kneisel teacher, Harrison Keith.

MRS. MAYNARD LADD of Chandon street and Beverly Farms coming northward from Florida, where she has been recuperating after a strenuous art season, and a fruitful season at her chosen form of artistic creation, accepted en route at the Roosevelt in New York.

AS ANNA COLEMAN LADD of Philadelphia and Boston, Mrs. Ladd is known in the art world of two cities, where she has been operating after a strenuous art season, and a fruitful season at her chosen form of artistic creation, accepted en route at the Roosevelt in New York.

OTHERS OF LOCAL note recently at the Roosevelt were Mrs. Philip L. Spalding, Mrs. Arthur Lyman, Miss Frances How-all in bride of next Autumn, according to present plans, and Miss Alvbie G. Dana. Mrs. W. Endicott Dexter and J. Lindsay Dexter also have been Roosevelt guests.

THE HOTEL AMBASSADOR in Gotham has housed Mr. and Mrs. Tarrant P. King and Mrs. Ronald T. Lyman put up there on the court end was from that since last spent during county at Aiken, S. C., where she spent being four weeks.

TRANSIENT GUESTS at the Ames Park Manor include Mrs. William T. Barnum of New Haven, now stopping in Charing Cross, Mrs. Louise M. Bowering of Salem, N. H., established in Arling Cross and Mrs. Charles H. Fiske of Jersey City, a guest in Charing Cross.

You feel as though you had bought it in Paris

Satin-smooth—caressing—made by the very method France uses for her finest toilet soaps

HOW wistfully you looked at them—those delicious French soaps that are so costly here in America! You loved them—but they were just too ridiculously expensive.

Then one day you sat down and wrote us, "Do make us a soap for personal use as delicious as French soap—but not so incredibly costly. Please—we know you can do it—you made us Lux."

So we made you a "savon de toilette" as enchanting as any you ever found in the most beguiling French apothecaries! Lux Toilet Form! Made it by the very method France developed for her finest toilet soaps. Made it quite differently from the white soaps you are used to.

Smooth, satiny, firm—ah, your luxury-loving fingers recognize that French "feel" the moment they touch Lux Toilet Form. Such a glossy, fine-textured cake.

Well What D'Ye Know About That?

Philadelphia—A policeman or a fireman hereafter must have at least 20 sound teeth because false molars have caused some firemen nearly to choke to death at fires.

Albany, N. Y.—There's quite a fight in the Legislature as to whether barbers can give the real modish boyish bob. Beauty parlor experts say the ordinary male barber can't, and they want hairdressers licensed by a state board.

New York—A well known criminal sociologist and outcast behaviorist is visiting town. That's the way Dr. Ben L. Reitman, director of the Hobo College of Chicago, describes himself. He notes that the horn has vanished from the Bowery with prohibition.

Moscow—Vodka at 90 cents a quart is proving so popular that the government has doubled its output in the last six months and still cannot supply the demand. It is 40 per cent. alcohol.

Los Angeles—A bank robber with Dutch courage is loose. He took a big swig from a bottle as he bound and gagged three employes of a branch of the Pacific Southwest Trust & Savings Bank, grabbed $2,426, took several more gulps and ambled out.

Kansas City—Pullman berths proved too cramped for Jack Earl, 18, a giant Texan, so he left for Chicago in a bed prepared for him on the floor of a dining car. He is 8 feet 4 inches tall, weighs 320 pounds and wears number 20 shoes.

BIDDEFORD FIRE CHIEF TO SEEK BOSTON JOB

Like Alexander the Great, Eugene Hooker is looking for new worlds to conquer. At the age of 26 he has been appointed chief engineer of the Biddeford, Me., fire department. He joined the department at 18. When his present term expires he wants to join the Boston fire department and endeavor to duplicate his rapid rise from the ranks in the Hub brigade.

DANVERS MAN FEELS YOUNG IN 104TH YEAR

The first hundred years may be the hardest, but not for Jazaniah C. Pierce of Danvers, who celebrated his 103d birthday anniversary and has entered into the 104th with as much vim and vigor as a man half his age.

"Early to bed and early to rise," is his centenarian's slogan for longevity. He claims his systematic habits have kept him alive all these years.

"And you can fool the best of them," he chuckled, with reference to the astute members of the medical profession. "I was rejected as a volunteer during the Civil War. Said I wasn't strong enough. My heart was weak."

And the "grand old man" chuckled some more.

"Weak heart," he continued. "They tell me now it is in fine condition."

At the home of his daughter, Mrs. Leland Rose in Danvers, Mr. Wright indulged in reminiscences that took him back 99 years. He talked of Weymouth, where he was born, of the landing, of all the folks he knew, of Civil War remembrances and of the present day generation.

103 Years Young

Jazaniah C. Pierce's heart was "too weak" to permit his enlistment in the Civil War, but it is still beating strong 61 years after the cessation of that conflict. Incidentally, Mr. Pierce, who lives in Danvers, is in his 104th year and feels just as young as 50 years ago.

MEXICANS NAB MAN WHO SHOT AMERICAN

Mexico City, March 25 (AP)—Special dispatches from Tepic confirm the capture of Remigio Ruales, who is declared to have been one of the men who killed Joe Hall, an American employed by the Mexican National Railways, last Monday near Ixtlan.

Satin-smooth—caressing—made by the very method France uses for her finest toilet soaps

HOW wistfully you looked at them—those delicious French soaps that are so costly here in America! You loved them—but they were just too ridiculously expensive.

Then one day you sat down and wrote us, "Do make us a soap for personal use as delicious as French soap—but not so incredibly costly. Please—we know you can do it—you made us Lux."

A PIRATE of HEARTS

By BEATRICE BURTON
Author of "GILDED KISSES"

Love Sufferings of a Beautiful Boston Girl Who Had Heartroom for One Man Only

"Rabby, where on earth have you been all day and all night?" asked Sylvia.

READ THIS FIRST

SYLVIA STARR, employed in the Boston Public Library, has been engaged to RANDALL PHELPS, Boston real estate man, for a year when he asks her to break their engagement. He tells her with brutal frankness that he's in love with her chum, FAY SHIRLEY, a Beacon Hill flirt

Heart-broken, Sylvia gives him up, greatly to the satisfaction of her Aunt Agnes ("AUNT AGONY"), the shrewd old maid who reared her. Aunt Agony says that Ranny will never be true to any one woman, and she calls him a lazy good-for-nothing besides. She encourages Sylvia to forget him and marry PETER WILK, who adores her. Peter is of a good Boston family.

Her opinion of Ranny seems to be justified when he and Fay give each other up and he marries Sylvia after all! For he falls in love with Fay all over again and on the nights when he isn't with her he's out gambling with his men friends, using Sylvia's housekeeping money for it

But when she tells h... that she's going to have a baby he miraculously settled dow... for... their Be... sweet flat and is almost a... Sylvia devotedly and is ex... of Peter Wilk.

Then, presently, ... ment to fat, well-... EDDIE CANTER, a State-street whole... merchant, and marries him

Ranny's young ... DOLLY, causes a commotion in the family circle by ... with the chauffeur, THOMAS BOYLE, an ambitious young ... veteran, who is studying law. MOTHER PHELPS vows never to forgive her, but does.

In the night when RANNY, JUNIOR, is born, Sylvia is all alone, for Ranny himself is out playing cards and Sylvia doesn't know where he is. The baby keeps Sylvia tied to the house and Ranny develops the habit of going out every night and staying until the wee small hours. Sylvia never suspects a new love affair until on the morning of the Fourth of July she finds a little blue handkerchief in his pocket. He leaves the house early in the morning and at midnight has not returned.

McGraw Cast in Role of Race Track Tout

Tampa, Fla., March 25 (A.P.)—John J. McGraw, "the brains" of the New York Giants and Havana real estate man, was unknowingly cast in a far different role by a newsboy at Tampa Downs yesterday.

Pictured as John J. McGraw was saying words to the effect "Now I know this horse. You can't tell me he won't win!"

The messenger boy, unaware of the sportsman's identity, rushed to the mutuel clerk of the 1 o'clock race, brought the manager back and pointed at the famous leader.

"Is he one of those touts?" the boy asked.

It was explained that a special police force is maintained at the races to keep touts away.

A "tout" is the synonym given the racetrack hanger-on who usually wants to sell so-called "inside information" on the horses.

Suzanne Scorns Chance to play for Yankee Coin

New York, March 25—Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen, French champion woman tennis player, is not the "unnecessary" athlete that some critics have declared her to be, according to the statement issued by Leslie A. Cutler.

Acting for C. C. Pete Cutler, Jr., who is a cousin to Lenglen, the tennis star's manager, Cutler has been offering her a fortune to come to this country to engage in a series of matches—about four in four, in fact. Yesterday Cutler received an answer in which he was informed that Mlle. Lenglen had turned down the offer, as she wished to remain an amateur and was not at all interested in any offers to play for money.

"And there's not what you might call rich people, at that," said Cutler. "Georges Carpentier went to school with Mlle. Lenglen and he declared that she would not accept the offer before it was ever sent," added Cutler.

TAKES TWO TO KEEP A HOME BUDGET

Boston Evening American Offers Aid to Housewives in Planning Expenditures of Income

Home Budget Editor,

NUMBER NINE

"WHO ought to have charge of the money—husband or wife?"

"Home-Maker" asks this question.

Answer: Both!

In a married household, it takes two to keep a budget just as surely as it takes two to make a quarrel. But listen to "Home-Maker's" plaint.

"My husband thinks I'm extravagant, and I think he is. He wants me to budget, but keeps charge of all the money. Often I have to get something charged and he moans for it, when if I had the money I could go to a cash store and buy it cheaper. How can I keep a budget if I never have the handling of the income?"

It IS a problem, isn't it, husbands and wives?

Unfortunately we can't tell from "Home Maker's" letter which is really the extravagant one. Our guess is that the husband is, but that they are both extravagant. Neither of them has ever learned that happy secret of living on their means.

The best thing to do, "Home Maker," is to have a heart-to-heart talk with Friend Husband and find out just where he thinks you are extravagant, and why. Keep your mind open, and don't resent his criticisms, even if you think they are unjust. Then you may be right, or he may be right, or each of you may have some ideas on management that he will listen to them. In any case, I am sure he will appreciate a reasonable attitude on your part, and will co-operate.

Budget your budget, and then if he complains when you serve fish or when he thinks more of the money he pays for your hat than for the food, just say to him, "Let him see that for himself." Let him see how easily it is to spend $10 a week for food, and how hard it is to make a dollar's worth of food do the work of $10 worth. Let him see that you can't do it. Then he will be ready to help you.

Questions and Answers

Home Budget Editor—My income is $35 a week. I have a wife and four children, pay $10 a month rent and furnish my own heat.

C. A. A.

By all present standards, you are justified in paying that rent, which comes to $11.54 per week. I suggest this budget: Rent $11.54, food, $18; clothing, $8; savings, $3.50; operating (including fuel, light, etc.), $6.50; personal, $3.46.

Perplexed—If your husband's income is so irregular I should first of all find out what he makes a week, and divide that by 52. Make a monthly budget. Ask us if we can help you after you have worked out figures. I cannot outline a budget for you, but suggest these percentages: Rent, 25; operating or upkeep of home, carefares, etc., 3.20; savings, 5.10; personal, 3.20; furnishings, 5.10; food, 30; clothing, 12.80; health, 3.20; recreation, 3.20; church, dues, etc., 5.

Home Budget Editor—I have been married three years. My husband gives me $15 a week; $10 of this I put away for monthly bills, and the other $5 I spend for food. I don't think I ever spent more than $6 a week on food since I started housekeeping. I have to be careful, and don't save one penny. Do you think I should?

I think you are a wonderful manager, and your husband is lucky if he is well fed on so small an allowance. You do not say what his income is, so I cannot tell how much ought to be saved; but I hardly see how you could save if you pay the rent out of what he gives you. If he carries life insurance, that is saving.

Mrs. J. M. H.—Your $5 a week for food would all be better fed if you would cultivate a taste for fish. You say none of them like it, but it is extremely food and should be alternated with meat. Cooking by gas is expensive for things that take a long time. Have you tried the fireless cooker? [illegible] is a small budget, based on figures you gave me, [illegible]: food, $17; clothing, $2.75; saving, $2; operating (running the home), $3.48

Mrs. A. M. writes that there is a saving. If they [illegible] would be allowed $10 a week for food, $5 for insurance and [illegible] $10 a year. With this for a start here is a monthly budget. The food allowance I have made [illegible], because the problem from the home garden helps it out. Shelter comes to $13.50 a month [illegible] clothing $15; saving $5; operating, $10; personal, $4.74. This totals $108.33, which is your income per month.

Mrs. J. L. H.—[illegible] husband [illegible] $30 a week. [illegible] deals are taken out. We pay $35 a month rent, which is over the right allowance, but to cover that, I cut off the [illegible] bill. We have [illegible] Miss H. [illegible]

How many holidays a year does your husband have to be idle? These vary with different kinds of work; some have only [illegible] days, duly 4 Labor Day and Thanksgiving. I should reckon up his yearly income and divide by 52 to find out exactly what he can [illegible] count on per week he can year round. Then send me the figures and I will gladly budget them for you. A sheet is being sent you.

Husband and Wife Should Be Partners in Saving

Mrs. M. A. writes: "I get $25 a [illegible] I pay $3 a week for [illegible] $6 a month for [illegible] $10 for [illegible] clothing. $4; operating (fuel, light, etc.), $4.80; personal, church, amusement, etc., $2.65; savings, $3. The husband's lunches should come out of the food allowance. If this is not enough Take off from personal and operating

Mrs. A. J. W.—The budget for $30 a week was given in the American [illegible] Monday

Miss J. R.—As long as you are saving $10 a month in a building and [illegible] you are not really [illegible] the same. You are solvent, [illegible] to cover [illegible] do [illegible] Standard Gas [illegible] month for two persons, $3; for $4; fuel $5; evening, operating light, telephone, [illegible] $1; personal, church, [illegible] etc., $1

FOXY GRANDPA STORY

By Foxy Grandpa

It was Spring time and as Bobby and I sat by the open window we plainly heard the music from a hand-organ. Bobby jumped up with delight and immediately gave me a fine exhibition of the Charleston. Miss Bunny used it and said he thought he would introduce a four-footed Charleston and that he was sure if he learned to do it well, he could win in any contest.

I lay back in my chair and roared and as I did the two little dancers were out of breath and went to the window for air.

"Why, Foxy Grandpa," shouted Bobby, "that hurdy-gurdy has a cage with two little birds in it and they are selling fortunes. Please give me a nickel. I'll throw it down to them and they'll play longer, and then I can run down to see them."

I tore off a corner of my newspaper, wrapped the nickel in it, and Bobby threw it down on the pavement below to the Italian who doffed his hat, looked up and smiled.

Bobby was out in the street in no time and soon came back with a little pink slip of paper which the bird had picked out with his tiny beak and given to Bobby.

"What is your fortune?" I asked Bobby, laughing.

"It says," read Bobby, "'Beware of a dark woman.' I guess that's my teacher. I didn't know my arithmetic very well yesterday."

Bobby paused a moment and then asked:

"What kind of birds are they anyway, Foxy Grandpa?"

They're love birds," I replied, "but they really belong to the parrot family."

"I'd love to have some," said Bobby, "and why do they call them love birds?"

"They call them love birds," I said, "because they appear to be so fond of each other and always stay cuddled up close together. And it is said that if one of the couple dies or flies away that the other one pines away, too, in a very short time and dies from loneliness."

"Then," said Bobby, "if I ever had a pair of love birds I'd be careful to always keep the cage door shut so that they couldn't get out."

DAILY SHORT STORY

WIND-BLOWN

By Maria C. Luttrell

SOMETIMES a lovely flower, from a wind-blown seed, springs up unexpectedly in a dump pile. In a corner of a factory in an out of the way place, where there is nothing else beautiful, Rose Marie was like that. Rose Marie was like that. She bloomed like a rare exotic flower of her own name in Mexico, Angeles Flats. A broad-faced, placid woman, was Rose Marie's mother. Somehow, in those three rooms and kitchenette spotlessly clean. Day after white her mother cleaned scrubbed and kneed crapy brown loaves of bread, Rose Marie sold lace in old man Monroe's big department store up town. The other girls in the neighborhood worked in the cotton mills that loomed like miles of glass windows beyond McAnnelly Flats.

Better Than Others.

"Rose Marie don't give herself any airs but she thinks she's better than the run of us," was the opinion of most of the girls who belonged to the Flats

"Have you heard thel atest?" asked Mollie McGuire of the neighborhood gang one night. "Rose Marie's joined a night school and carries books on her arm like a kid."

"What she aiming to do with all her learning?" questioned Sam Moore squinting an eye at Mollie.

"Oh, Sam, ain't you ashamed?" Mollie pretended to be shocked.

"Mickey's been soft on Rose Marie since he hauled her in his goat wagon. He never would have up and gone to California if he hadn't thought he'd strike it rich out there and maybe make money enough to marry Rose Marie. He writes to her reguar. I asked the postman and he said two or three letters come every week."

"Rose Marie ain't looking at the likes of Mickey. She wants a swell. And she's got looks enough to land one, too," commented Ted Borden.

"Yes, maybe, if she don't fall for one of these swells that ain't got an ear for the wedding march," said Ted knowingly. "Wait, for the land sakes, look yonder! It's just like a movie. Clap your eyes on that car Rose Marie's come home in."

Handsome Car.

The group turned and started as a good looking chap gallantly helped lovely Rose Marie from his hand some car. They stood talking together. To a soft laughter of Rose Marie floated to them. When she finally ran up the creaking stairs the man waited and looked up and down the street, speculatingly.

"If that guy tries any dirty tricks in the flats he'll think Uncle Sam keeps his army down here near the mills," Ted assured them calmly, a sinister look on his lean, swarthy faces.

"Two or three letters from poor old Mickey every week ain't worth a minute's ride in that speed wagon," shrugly retorted Mollie, eyeing the car enviously as it passed. "I know that fellow. He's old man Monroe's son—up in the store where Rose Marie works."

Night after night, when business hours were over, the car brought Rose Marie home. Often enough the two of them sat in the car before the dingy tenement house for a half hour and passersby could hear the happy, carefree laughter of the girl and the low, tense voice of the man. But Rose Marie never went out at night in that car. The neighbors commented on that.

Wore Her Best.

Rose Marie began to wear her best crepe dress to the store, and her big blue eyes were shining with the promise of things to be. Her love affair with the boss' son was like a miracle to the Flats and the neighborhood congregated daily to see the car that was like Cinderella's coach to them. A florist's car stopped often at Rose Marie's door and waves of hot house flowers usurned the place of the little pots of bloom that had been Rose Marie's pride for so long.

Sunday afternoons Rose Marie went riding. On such occasions, her father, uncomfortable in a starched shirt and her mother, dressed in her best with her poor feet aching inside of shining, laced up shoes, would go down the stairs to speak to the young man and to look rather hopefully toward that big empty back seat of the car. But young Monroe never asked them to take a ride.

Then one day Rose Marie spoke of it. "I wish you'd ask Dad and Ma to go with us," she said as they drove away leaving her two smiling loved ones on the hot, narrow brick pavement

Hands Trembled.

That remark was Bob Monroe's cue to say the lines he had often rehearsed to himself. "Look here, Rose Marie, I'm in love with you. Awfully. Can't sleep nights for thinking of you and wanting you. But my folks would never stand for your folks. That's a fact. I hate to say it, of course, but I'm honest about it. Over on the west side, they think that McAnnally Flats is out of the world. And it is—their world. Now, I'll give you the money and we'll get married. Then not a soul will know you're from this town. You can send your father and mother money—Dad wants me to marry and settle down and he'll be generous, but for goodness' sake, never let on they're your folks. I love you, Rose Marie, but I can't go the old folks."

His hands on the wheel were trembling. He was honest. There was no doubt of that. He turned to look at Rose Marie. All of the color had drained from her face. She was looking down, twisting a wisp of a handkerchief nervously. She gave no sign that she had heard him. She began in a weak voice that presently grew stronger and laughed and talked as she usually did. She adroitly turned the subject [illegible] tion whenever it appeared to touch on personal things. Bob Monroe was baffled. Once again before her door, he determined to clinch the matter then and there. But Rose Marie spied a taxi that had drawn up at the curb behind them. She opened the door of the car and hopped out before Bob could stop her.

"There's Mickey!" she cried and was gone.

Heads popped out of windows up and down the street. What a surprise they had to see Mickey, red of head and freckled as of old but such a Mickey! In tailored clothes with the air of a millionaire about him. Bob Monroe slowly rode away as Mickey and Rose Marie, both talking at once, started up the creaking, narrow stairs.

"Movies?" said Mickey dramatically, waving his hand. "I'm going to be featured. The day I signed my swell contract with MacMillan company—I asked for ten days leave. Then I started here by [illegible] you—" By that time they had reached the door and Mickey was being embraced by Rose Marie's father and mother. "As I was telling Rose Marie," he resumed, "I signed a contract and then I beat it here to tell you folks that I have a house, furniture, all ready.

Nice Little Car.

"There's a nice little car setting in the garage waiting for you, Rose Marie. Pepper trees growing in your own yard and geraniums—well, Rose Marie, they grow about as high as you—what's the matter, honey? You crying? When Mickey's come back for you? Oh, Rose Marie, don't you and your Pa and Ma want the little house? I fixed it for you. It's in your name."

There was distress in Mickey's florid face. His eyes were glittering with sudden tears. It was not hard to see how Mickey had earned that lovely little house, the yard with the pepper trees and the geraniums hedge, as tall as Rose Marie.

Rose Marie stepped very close to him so close that she heard his big heart beating, beating like the heaviest of sledge hammers pounding away.

"We want —want you, Mickey darling just the same as we always did," she whispered and the touch of her warm and soft face against him made Mickey's Irish heart pound harder.

If this practice of holies up to suits becomes general, consider the consequences—

1. A great majority of our jurists will immediately step down from the bench and go to jail.

2. There will be but one or two lawyers at liberty.

3. Such minor public servants as deputy sheriffs, policemen, etc., will practically all hand in their badges and submit to arrest.

And then a great benefit shall be felt the people, and there will be weeping throughout the land.

Rare likeness of a big land A swamp man from Florida, who gave Lady Teazle her early training in mineralogy. His name was Gibberty, or Blessenbar—authorities differ on this point.

Lexicographers who have puzzled over the Teazle correspondence often evince a twinge of deep-seated heartache, like unto gout, when they come upon the bidding meaning in certain unfettered paragraphs written on that May morning some six weeks later.

It must be kept in mind that the United States government spends nearly $7,000,000 a year to learn secrets of the weather and transmit this knowledge to the public.

I am in receipt of a letter asking me what "system" the fair students in Wellesley used, by which, on paper they were able to "beat the market" to the tune of thousands of dollars. All I can say is that I don't believe the system would prove practicable in genuine market operations. No system to "beat the market" other than by luck has ever been devised, any more than one has been created which would "break the bank" at Monte Carlo. If it is not a system, but common sense, training and good fortune that prove profitable in Wall Street, but the three simply must be combined.

John Hancock is to have a statue erected to his memory by the John Hancock Memorial Association of Quincy. A year ago we expressed the opinion that Quincy granite was the most appropriate material for the proposed memorial, and this has been finally decided upon, in the face of "artistic" and other opposition. Enrolled among the chosen few of the many American patriots to be laid out in granite in commemoration, John Hancock already has substantial and apparently everlasting memorials in the guise of business organizations. We should be loth to see him further honored in granite when it seems to be more common to attempt to honor such patriots and serve the memory of our New England patriots.

The Bootblack That Worked "for Himself"

Fire in His Eye, Perspiration on His Coat. As for WORK, in the Language of Our Day, "He Ate It"

It was a bootblack studio, with chairs reserved for ladies.

Young gentlemen were shining shoes, with the hired man's methodical slowness. One among them was methodical but not slow. He was one of the youngest, an Italian. For each customer he had a word. For every shoe he had a feverish energy worthy of the highest grade efficiency.

If another artist had work unfinished, this demon of work finished it. He didn't care how he worked, where he worked, how MUCH or how FAST he worked — he only wanted to WORK.

Perspiration came through his coat, through his hair. You have seen nothing like him except a first-class gray squirrel in a revolving cage.

"A remarkable workman you have working for you there," said an old gentleman, paying the nicely dressed, middle-aged cashier.

"Working for me?" said the cashier. "I'm working FOR HIM. That's the boss."

Those words—"that's the boss"—told the story.

Why did he work and enjoy it and look for a chance to work more?

Because effort gave HIM immediate results.

A pair of brown shoes meant ten cents, a pair of black shoes another ten cents, and some particularly fancy shoes that his eye could see across the street, meant fifteen cents.

He worked because he loved it, and loved it because HE WAS WORKING FOR HIMSELF.

Here are some observations addressed to those working for THEMSELVES—namely, all the employers of the country.

Remember that you must not expect employes to feel as you do about work. The man to whom you give fifteen dollars a week, or a thousand dollars a week, cannot be expected to display the fiery enthusiasm of that perspiring young bootblack.

It is for you to work as the bootblack worked—you who get ten cents from the tan shoes and another ten cents from the black, a million dollars from the warships, or a thousand dollars from the carload of beef—whatever your business may be.

Don't expect any man to work as THE BOSS works for himself.

Never forget for a moment that it is wisdom, if you can imagine it, to give the worker, however humble, a real interest in the work that he is doing. And the only REAL, real interest is an interest that pays better profit when the work is better done.

Something can be accomplished by showing appreciation and gratitude. But after a man has worked hard to say to him, "It is very nice of you to work so hard FOR ME," is a pretty dry compliment. Give your man a chance to do better for himself when he works harder—and he will work harder if the extra reward is a fair one.

The only thing worth while in life is WORK. But ninety-nine per cent. of all work is done by employes working for wages, and work becomes a dull routine, the least interesting part of life, whereas it ought to be the most interesting.

The day is coming when ATTRACTIVE INDUSTRY will solve the world's chief problem. But that day is not yet.

The change from the slave, owned body and soul, to the serf chained to the land was not such a very great change.

And the change from the serf fastened to the soil, to the salaried employe fastened to the payroll, the counter, the factory, is not such a gigantic change.

To be happy, to be efficient, be at his best, a man must be WORKING FOR HIMSELF.

If you went into the bootblacking studio, found out how much was earned in a week by that young genius of industry, and offered him DOUBLE THAT MONEY on a salary, you would ruin him. Give him a certainty, with no hope of extra gain, and his enthusiasm would be dead.

It is uncertainty, the knowledge that every new effort means something FOR HIM, that keeps the individual doing his best.

10,000,000 Vote to Keep His Property

Four million German votes were necessary to provide a referendum concerning the former Kaiser's property rights. Instead of FOUR million, TEN million voted, and the German people will now decide, by referendum, how many tens of millions the Kaiser should be allowed to take from his German people.

The vote was taken, appropriately, on the anniversary of the revolution of 1848, the first uprising against German kings.

That was the uprising that made it necessary for Richard Wagner to leave Germany. Had the uprising been successful Wagner might have remained in politics, only writing or signing music "for fun."

That would have been a great calamity, the world needed "The King," but otherwise it might have been fortunate for the Germans had the 1848 revolution been more successful. They would have been spared many years of rule by the "All Highest," including the years from 1914 on.

On Their Own Land

Men Fight Hard

Men on their own territory and willing to fight are hard to beat. The French and Spaniards are realizing it in their fight against Abd-el-Krim, leader of the Riffians.

One hundred thousand Spaniards and as many Frenchmen with cavalry, tanks, flying machines, shrapnel, machine guns and other equipment, will soon be in the field ready for the Spring campaign.

After three years of fighting the Riffians are still fighting, scattered over their sandhills, hiding in their mountains. Abd-el-Krim declines to swear allegiance to the Sultan of Morocco. Another great European offensive against Abd-el-Krim will begin early in May. It will be successful if it kills him. Otherwise not.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

"POOH!" snorts Grandma Fitch. "I never heard of such foolishness. Things have come to a fine state if girls have to go to college to learn how to bring up babies. You'd better believe no one stood for nonsense like that when I was a girl. Then you learned how to bring up a baby by having one. And that's the only sensible way. As if an old maid professor could teach anyone how to take care of a baby. Why, a mother knows instinctively what's good or bad for her child. They don't need college courses. It's just another crazy scheme for wasting money, that's what it is."

Grandma Fitch is talking about the various courses on infant physiology and child training that are being installed in many of our universities—courses in which honest-to-goodness babies aid the professors in their demonstrations.

It is true that such courses weren't available when Grandma Fitch was a young mother. Which may have some slight bearing on the fact that infant mortality was so extremely high in those simple days. For, despite Grandma's faith in the old programs, experience has proven that a pound of sound training is worth several tons of sweet, old-fashioned instinct.

What is instinct, any way?

Is it up-to-the-minute information released from the source of life — mamma's guidance? And can it be depended upon to supply the accurate directions for dealing with anything from tonsilitis to tantrums?

Most mammas even in this day believe it is and can. But it isn't and it can't.

Instinct Sixth Sense

Instinct isn't a sixth sense or a divine tip. It was popularly supposed to be such for a long time, but we now know that the instinct which we exercise in the ordinary events of life is nothing but MEMORY stirring in its sleep.

Memory is a far older thing than most of us realize. It reaches far beyond the confines of our individual exercise, back and back into the lives of all those who have gone before us, back even into the life of the savage and half-brute who were our first grandpas. It covers an enormous amount of racial experience. Not all the details of that racial experience are stored in our individual memories, but certain outstanding reactions are stored. For instance, we think if things are thrown at us; that's instinct, remembering the danger of being hit.

We protect ourselves and our property in scores of other "instinctive" ways, because for all these countless generations our forefathers were so forced to protect themselves and their property, and they have bequeathed that habit of mind to us. Racial memory—that's instinct. And you can see it as easily in a mouse as in a man. It's exactly the same thing.

Change in Thought

Now it must be plain from this that while our grandpas might have handed down to us some fairly good directions for dodging falling trees, they can't help us much in dealing with pyorrhea or appendicitis, automobiles or gas ranges all of which can and do menace our modern children much more than falling trees. In other words, it's absurd to expect grandpas who lived before King Tut to tell you what to do in the reign of Calvin Coolidge.

Yet that's exactly what Grandma Fitch expects instinct to do for mamas. She and the other mothers of her day wept over dead babies who might easily have been saved if their mothers had understood the simplest laws of hygiene. Instinct failed her entirely in this respect, for while instinct will guide a mamma cat, whose racial habits haven't changed in 3,000 years, it fails entirely with humans whose habits and environment change with every generation.

That's why we're at last installing courses on motherhood in our colleges. And education has never taken a wiser step. For if there's one thing this country needs above all else, it's girls with the Trained Mama degree.

WORDS OF THE WISE MEN

Everyone can master a grief but he that has it. —Shakespeare.

The accent of one's country dwells in the mind and in the heart as much as in the language.
—La Rochefoucauld.

A disorderly patient makes the physician cruel. —Syrus.

Silence and modesty are very valuable qualities in conversation.—Montaigne.

Question not, but live and labor
Till you goal be won,
Helping every feeble neighbor,
Seeking help from none;
Life is mostly froth and bubble,
Two things stand, like stone—
Kindness in another's trouble,
Courage in your own.
—Gordon.

TWO LITTLE HUMAN BOOKS OF GOOD VERSE

By DR. FRANK CRANE.

TWO little books of verse have come to my table.

They are not great books. About the only thing you can say about them is that they are human. But they have this quality in exuberance.

Strangely enough one comes from the Atlantic coast and the other from the Pacific, for one is by John V. A. Weaver of New York and the other by Agatha Brown, which is I presume the nom-de-plume of Virginia Church of Los Angeles.

They seem to me to be real poetry; that is, they have the poetry of ideas and not of words.

What can be a finer parallelism than this between a box of candy and youth: A girl gets a box of candy. She eats it and it makes her sick. She resolves next time to save it and eat it little by little.

"'I'll make it last this time, and I won't get sick.'
But mice got in, and ants, and it was ruined.

Ain't there no way you can do with a box of candy?
And suppose it ain't candy, but bein' in love I mean:
Oh, has it always got to be too fast,
So that it's gone right off, and leaves you sick,
Or else it drags along and gets all stale?
Has it got to be always either one or the other?"

In another poem "Pa" calls the girl and her mother "leaners" because they are always leaning out of the window. The girl describes her experiences as follows:

"In the afternoons
We get a pillow apiece and rest it down
On the window, and Ma puts her arm around me.
And we can see everything like a regular movie.
What do we care if Pa calls us 'leaners'?"

In the poem "Forty-eight Hours from June" is subtly depicted the call of beauty and romance which leads a girl to tragedy. It winds up:

"What do I care
What happens afterward? I only have
One life . . . I'm goin' to live! . . . Where is my pen?
Flowers, and birds, and grass. . . .
'Dear Mr. Kirby, . . .'"

This is the sort of thing that does not overload the imagination, but gives it enough suggestion to carry it forward.

Virginia Church's book is equally suggestive. It is the confessions of the intimate thoughts of a school ma'am. We learn from it how human a school mistress may be and that "teachers are people," which is the name of the book. For instance, the poem "Intercepted" runs as follows:

"Jimmy sits in the front row;
Across the aisle is Flossie.
Today as I turned from the board
I intercepted a look
Holy as altar fires,
That flamed from youth to youth.
I caught my breath.
All afternoon I've felt old and lonesome."

That peculiar affection that a young person may have for an older one, which some of us experience, is told in the poem called "Jennie:"

"I am singularly fortunate in having
Some little wren-like person always ready
To take me under her wing."

It concludes:

"This morning she ventured to suggest
That maybe I might still get married—
If I tried hard enough."

Her advice to the critics is in point. She describes the younger generation as struggling in a world that has been wished on the present day youth.

"Problems, industrial, political, moral,
Surge in the air. . . . A new environment
Like a mighty rushing torrent
Is sweeping the world.
The younger generation
Knee-deep in its waters,
Is trying valiantly
To utilize the energy of the current,
While we stand on the shore,
Wringing our hands,
And criticize their bathing suits."

There are many flashes of genuine humor also in the book.

Altogether these two books are really human. Mrs. Church describes one pupil as saying, "Gee, Miss Brown, you're not a bit like a teacher. You're so human."

'You Said It, Marceline!'

By MARCELINE D'ALROY

ON "WHO ARE THE DUMB?"

SOME WOMEN are born
CHARMING;
THESE are the kind
MEN are always LOOKING FOR.
MANY GIRLS are born
BEAUTIFUL; these are
ALL looked at; for beauty
Is forever DESIRABLE.
SOME GIRLS are born
DUMB, but it does
Not seem TO MATTER.
For MANY men think
SILENCE is FLATTERY.
It takes brains, too,
To RECOGNIZE BRAINS.

But it takes POSITIVE
GENIUS for a man to Realize that, when a
PRETTY GIRL is hanging on His EVERY WORD,
She has NOT GOT ANY.
BEAUTY is sometimes
OVER-ESTIMATED. Charm
NEVER IS, for its power
IS OBVIOUS.
But WHERE, oh! WHERE is
The person WISE enough
To give a CORRECT ESTIMATE of a PRETTY DUMB GIRL?
For the dumb-belle of TODAY
MAY BE the DUCHESS of TOMORROW!

WHEN PROCRASTINATION IS THIEF OF SUCCESS

Delay in starting is often the cause of your enforced hurry all day.

You begin the day usually by having to go without your breakfast all because of that last snatch of sleep.

Going without breakfast may do for the man or the woman who must diet to get thin, but to the business man or woman it means less vitality.

So that little extra nap spoils your health and your work all day.

You have certain mail to get out by a certain train but you put off dictating till it puts your stenographer up in the air. Her nervous mistakes result in bad copy or you miss the proper time for mailing. So you lose money by being behind in your business arrangements.

Again you have an inspiration; you know it ought to work out a financial success and you are sure you can put it over; but you wait till someone else gets the same idea. Then you ruin the enterprise by doing it with a rush, thus muddling the fine points which might have made it a big success.

Why not get your work done first and rest afterward.

Why not be punctual in business engagements and to take advantage of business opportunities and increase your success as well as your composure.
